The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

5,105

The Sultan still reigns; but does he rule?

What's this? Roosevelt and his son sick already? Molluscoid!

The board of trade to-night and the citizens' meeting to-morrow night. Don't forget them.

If all the would-be Adele Boas runaways will kindly stay at home, they will confer a favor on an overworked public. The White kidnapping case was enough for a time, thanks.

When Frederick Moore, the New York Sun's correspondent at the seat of war in Turkey, was wounded by a bullet, his wife heavily tried to assume his duties and called a dispatch to the paper. The dispatch while short was very full of "meat," showing that she has a "nose for news" as well as her husband.

It has been discovered that the act No. 37 of the statutes of 1908 did not abolish the board of county teachers' examiners, although it did take from them the power to examine teachers and to grant certificates following such examinations. The act still leaves in the hands of the county examiners the duty of examining candidates for free tuition in high schools, and in order that towns may legally pay tuition the papers must be passed upon by the county examiners. Therefore, the board of county examiners remains, although it was the evident intent of the statute to abolish it in the effort to provide "a more uniform and economical system of examination of teachers."

REFUSING AUTO OPERATORS LICENSES.

The refusal of Secretary of State Bailey to grant an operator's license to a Burlington automobilist sets a new precedent in Vermont and establishes a mode of procedure which may be followed whenever state attorneys or other prosecuting officers have the same measure of suspicion that State Attorney Shaw of Chittenden county displayed. The autoist in question was operating a machine in Burlington last summer when an accident occurred, resulting in fatal injuries to one of the occupants of the car and serious injury to two others, including the operator, and State Attorney Smaw complained to the secretary of state that the operator is not a proper person to run a machine. Whereupon it was incumbent upon the autoist to prove to the secretary of state, who has the licensing power, that he possessed the "qualifications" which, in the opinion of the secretary of state, entitled him for the work.

Having failed to prove this to the satisfaction of the official he is debarred from securing an operator's license under the act entitled, "Regulation of Automobiles and Motor Vehicles." Of course, this procedure places the secretary in a rather hard position and it requires of him the exercise of a fine discrimination and the display of absolute impartiality. But the present incumbent of the office is particularly well fitted for this more or less judicial function and he can be relied upon to use good judgment in a case of this sort.

Whether or not this section of the automobile regulation law will have the desired effect of restraining the reckless use of motor cars remains to be seen; but it is bound to have its direct influence in keeping off the public thoroughfares such persons as may be adjudged not to have the qualifications of caution, etc., requisite to the running of an automobile.

New Spring Clothes

Just got back from New York, been buying new Spring Clothes—men's, women's and children's.

Had good luck—struck some extra good bargains in first class clothes. Bought low for cash.

Now we'll sell you, brand new goods at lower price than charged most places for same quality.

Come in today—see the stylish suits for men and lots of other desirable things.

Even if you don't want to buy, step in and look 'round. Glad to see you.

CURRENT COMMENT

First Catch Him in His Hole.

It may be a little early to write about woodchucks, but it is better to be early than late. A sure cure for the cloverfield pest is said to be had in exploding a giant firecracker as far down a woodchuck's hole as it conveniently can be placed. The scheme has the special advantage of making the digging of a grave for the dead woodchuck unnecessary. Naturally, to have the cure absolutely sure, the woodchuck should be in his hole when the cracker is fired.—Burlington Clipper.

"Another Degenerate."

The conviction of Elroy Kent on the charge of murder has revived remembrance of the Mary Rogers case in all of its long-drawn-outness and horror. Certain contingencies have expressed the opinion, arrived at presumably on general principles, that Kent will never be hanged, while others have urged his apparent degeneracy as a reason for not hanging him. Mary Rogers was a degenerate if there ever was one, but degeneracy did not save her any more than her sex did. If degeneracy is a proper cause of incident for commutation of the death sentence, there was never a better case upon which to make a beginning than was that of the Rogers woman; indeed, so far is this true, that the saving of Kent from the noose for that reason, after hanging the woman in spite of it, would be a greater disgrace to the state than was the woman's execution under the light of the most loathsome repertorial description that characterized the event.—Burlington Clipper.

Foster.

Success magazine places Congressman Foster among the "cold feet" insurgents of the national house of representatives. It says he was one of those who by their "defection at a critical time" did more to help Cannonism than they could possibly have done had they never given the appearance of opposing it. So it looks to us. David J. did a lot of "in-surg-ing" on paper, but when it came time to vote he was found among the faithful heels of Uncle Joseph. The letter of explanation which appeared in the St. Albans Messenger Wednesday doesn't alter that fact. It's probably true, as one J. E. Harris says, that if Congressman Foster hadn't trimmed at the last moment the displeasure of the Republican organization would have been visited upon him in a way to cripple his usefulness to his constituents. In other words, the representative of Vermont First District would have found himself unable to convert the waste spring water into more hard dollars than could otherwise be realized from months of hard labor on the farm. It would require very little of his time, and would be a pleasure as well as a profit.—Hardwick Gazette.

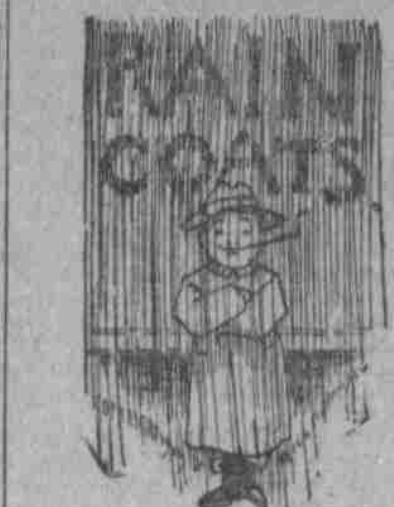

Raising Trout For The Home Table

Sometimes a general and exceedingly profitable Vermont industry will be the breeding and raising of trout for home consumption and the available neighboring markets. Innumerable Vermont farms offer magnificent natural opportunities for this industry. If there is a spring of clear and pure water on your premises the foundation and much of the superstructure of the industry is already at hand. Prepare an area of the size which you desire the pond or reservoir to contain on the little brook and not far from the spring which supplies it, and then build a safe, tight and serviceable dam. Proper screens on the dam and an adequate and continuous supply of pure water and you are ready for business. Trout fry can be procured from the state hatchery, if the authorities are assured that the plant is properly fitted for them. All that remains to be done then is to see that they don't escape, that they have plenty of suitable food and that they are secure from the depredations of the minks and muskrats. With a little well directed energy and industry many a farmer's boy could thus convert the waste spring water into more hard dollars than could otherwise be realized from months of hard labor on the farm. It would require very little of his time, and would be a pleasure as well as a profit.—Hardwick Gazette.

The Tuberculosis Exhibit.

We are reading too much about a "tuberculosis exhibit" at various points in the state. There are too many of them seen every day, without advertising and parading them. Every good citizen will co-operate cheerfully in improving such conditions and eradicating the causes without the object lesson of a professional traveling exhibit. The term "tuberculosis exhibit" is not a happy one. It doesn't sound well.—Hardwick Gazette.

It is difficult to imagine that such flippant and thoughtless comment on a serious subject came from a full grown man. Ignorance and indifference are the two great obstacles which must first be passed before the light fairly begins with the most deadly enemy of the human race today. Tuberculosis is to a large extent a preventable disease, and in a good percentage of cases it can be cured by proper treatment if taken in time. It is an infectious, not a contagious disease, and can be transmitted from an ill person to a well person by means of the bacilli which are thrown off in the sputum. The danger lies in the unbroken chain maintained through the transmission of the disease from one person to another. If segregation could be provided for all persons afflicted with tuberculosis could be practically stamped out in a short term of years. Today it is a scourge which costs the country not less than 200,000 lives a year and hundreds of millions of dollars in pecuniary loss. It numbers its victims in far greater array than diphtheria, measles, whoopingcough, scarlet fever, smallpox and cancer combined. To eradicate the great white plague people must be educated to a realization of its dangers, as to guard against it with preventive measures and to know how to give it proper treatment when the disease is already seated. In this campaign of education such an exhibit as the arranged by Vermont state board of health will be of inestimable value. This is the kind of humanitarian work which should receive the encouragement and support of every thoughtful citizen.—Brattleboro Phoenix.

CHELSEA

Miss Ruth Pavey went to Tunbridge Saturday to visit friends.

Mrs. Fred A. Ordway went last week Wednesday to Barre City to visit her daughter, Mrs. Earl E. Parker.

John D. Sutton returned last week from Gayville, where he went several weeks ago to visit his old home friends.

Harold Corwin arrived in town last week to spend his summer vacation from his school work at Northfield, Mass.

Charles L. Denmore returned last week from Hanover, N. H., where he had been spending a few days with Edward B. Hatch.

In addition to the list of teachers in town published last week, Miss Clara Boardman will teach in the Eugene G. Thorne district.

Miss Fannie Hobson, who keeps house for Alonzo F. Morey, on the West Hill has been entertaining as her guest of late, her nephew, Sidney Maynard of Randolph.

Madam Emily Sanborn, who has been stepping for several weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Callista Lucas, went Sunday to stay for a time with her son, John Sanborn.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson S. Ordway have recently sold their farm, stock and tools to their son Irving Ordway. Consideration $3,000. Mr. and Mrs. Ordway have not as yet decided where they will locate.

Cecil Kent, who makes his home with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Davis, went to Hartford Saturday to attend the spring term of school and will board with his mother, Mrs. Arthur Maynard.

Roy T. Sanborn has been appointed administrator, with the will annexed, of the estate of his father the late Benson Sanborn, and H. N. Mattison and M. O. Gates have been appointed commissioners on the estate.

Frank G. Carey, who lives on the Sylvanus Hubbard farm on the west hill, has rented J. H. Sprague's farm just over the line in Brookfield which has been occupied for several years by H. D. Corne, who has rented the Hiram A. Kingsbury farm on the West Hill.

Richard H. Bacon and wife of North Cheltenham, N. H., and Miss Gertrude M. Bacon of Claremont, N. H., who came here last week to attend the wedding of their sister, Miss Grace G. Bacon, to Stanley C. Wilson, returned to their respective homes the last of the week.

Dr. Ralph Merchant, veterinary surgeon, who has occupied the McMillan house in the Braman neighborhood for the past year has rented the house and barn of John Sanborn's farm. Both Dr. Merchant and Dr. W. H. Hill are having an extensive and successful veterinary practice.

Rev. Fred Daniels returned Friday from a two weeks' vacation, during which time he attended the Vermont Methodist conference at Hardwick. Mr. Daniels was returned to the Chelsea parishes for another year, which is a source of great satisfaction to his parishioners and the towns people in general.

Ed. D. Fuller and his brother, Eugene Fuller of Lowell, Mass., came Friday to attend on Saturday the Taplin and Fuller auction, which was attended by a large crowd and property sold well as it always does when Charles E. Godfrey wields the hammer. The Fuller brothers left Sunday for their home in Lowell, where both have employment as stationary engineers.

BROOKFIELD.
